Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Renata Hesse:

As a United States citizen, I urge you to withdraw your consent to the revised proposed Final Judgment settlement in the United States v. Microsoft Corp. antitrust case. The limitations and punishments imposed upon Microsoft do not sufficiently restore the competitive conditions prevailing prior to Microsoft's unlawful conduct.

The Settlement only prevents Microsoft from future monopolistic practices; it does not punish Microsoft for previous unlawful behavior. The advantages of immediacy and certainty of the proposed Final Judgment are not sufficient cause for abandonment of pursuit of further litigation.

The damage done to individuals and businesses by design of Microsoft and its engineers and practices requires more punitive measures than a slap on the wrist and a promise to never get caught at doing it again.

I urge you to pursue litigation of the issue of remedy, whether as set forth in the Final Judgement entered by the District Court on June 7, 2000, or as one of the other remedy proposals described in the Competitive Impact Statement, section (V) Alternatives to the Proposed Final Judgement.

Thank you for your time and consideration,
